LONDON — As usual, London is jammed with summer tourists. It's No. 1 for fast money here, having passed Scotch whiskey and motor cars. Tourist business is a delight to governments. No need to ship anything. Does not use up natural resources—except wear and tear on sidewalks.

Best of all, you don't even have to send for the money. The tourist brings it with him. Americans left two billion bucks overseas last year. And—despite the President's reasonable pleas—they will spend more this year. ("But George, EVERYBODY'S going to Europe!")

Even though it means money in the pocket, I get a feeling the British are fed up with the wandering hordes. A little edginess in hotel and restaurant help that used to be concealed by British manners.

This happened in France. Three occupation armies and THEN a constant occupation by tourists blew the French fuse. And Americans came home saying, "What are they so rude for? After all, we came to spend money!"

Money is not enough when every third customer is complaining about rooms, tables, and service. There just isn't enough of any of them to go around. I can feel the steam build up myself. And I know this town—I lived here for a year.

"We will be in London in late August and would be grateful for any information."

There are English customs that oil your way. (Nothing grates on an Englishman like a breach of customs. It's a small island. Don't stand on somebody's toes.)

Reserve everything—"book" is the word. Book your morning papers with the hall porter—the man with crossed keys on his uniform collar.

He handles your mail, your keys, your theater tickets. The papers will then be delivered under your door each morning. Recommended: the Daily Mail, The Daily Express, the Times.

Have the hall porter book your table at the restaurant. You can walk into the restaurant without booking and, even if it's half empty, the head waiter looks as if you'd struck his mother. But if you are "booked," he loves you. (And English food is getting better. It's not Paris, Claude. But you can eat it.)

Don't make a big thing of it, but start off by giving the hall porter ten shillings ($1.20). Make it a pound ($2.40) in the deluxe hotels. If you're getting a lot of service, a little more from time to time may add to the comfort.

"Are there travel advisors for tours and sightseeing?"

Go to British Travel, the Government tourist bureau, at 64 St. James street, and get loaded with advice. (I hate to say this. British Travel are the people who shorted me on the room I'm getting hurled out of. But the ARE good for tourist information.)

Drop into any of the Barclay Bank branches—all over London. Pick up a free city of "London 1968." A map. What to do. Also get their free "Show Guide." All the movies, all the plays now showing. This is a great theater season in London.

London theaters open at a reasonable 7:30 or so. So you can eat after the show—avoiding that early eating rush. Best after-show restaurant I've found is Rule's in Maiden Lane. Good food. Good service. Edwardian atmosphere. The headman is Harry. And Jack, behind the bar, saves match covers. Bring in some odd ones from the States and be a hero.

Annual Fireworks Show Scheduled for Fourth

There will be excitement and entertainment for all members of the family at the 30th annual American Legion Fireworks Spectacular and Thrill-O-Ra is slated for the Los Angeles Coliseum tomorrow.

The stadium gates will open at 5 p.m. and soon thereafter a championship baseball game between teams of 13- and 14-year-olds will get under way. Manny Harmon and his 30-piece band will set the mood for the Independence Day fete with patriotic music.

Ariene Wells will lead the assembled thousands in the singing of the National Anthem and a unit from the Los Angeles Police Department led by Commander Charles Mack will serve as the color guard. Bobby Canfield, Uncle Sam's nephew, will lead the pledge of allegiance. Trumpeter Pinky Savitt will play "Taps" from atop the tower at the peristyle end of the Coliseum in tribute to the fallen heroes of USA.

THE GENIAL master of ceremonies, Dick Sinclair, will be at the mike to tell all of the stars and dignitaries riding in the grand entry parade. Jeeps will carry the USO performers who have entertained our troops in all parts of the globe.

The Los Angeles City Fire Department will give a demonstration featuring the latest in firefighting techniques and equipment. Then the center of attraction will be the Destruction Derby with 30 bars banging and crashing into each other until only one is still running. Several other events are scheduled.

The evening will be climaxed with the world's largest display of fireworks—magnificent set-pieces and brilliant aerial bursts. The pyrotechnics will carry out the theme "A Salute to Southland Service Clubs and a Tribute to the USO Performers 'Who Entertain Our Troops.'"
